DETAILED ACTION

Receipt is acknowledged of the amendment filed 05/08/2008.

The rejection under 35 US 103(a) over Schneider et al is maintained in this action. The specifics of that rejection are found in the previous action.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 05/08/2008 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Schneider et al; describe coating of vascular graft material with ECM which includes the proteins of the claims. While the proteins are present, there is no disclosure of these constituents at the specific claimed concentrations.

While Schneider makes the statement of superior results over isolated constituents, applicant is incorrect in saying that it teaches away. The same result is indicated. However, Schneider et al make a strong case for the lack of unexpected results from the instant composition given their showing of superior results. No such comparative data is present in the instant application.

With regard to applicant's arguments concerning the enhanced probability of thrombosis, it is interesting that applicant's own specification suggests that like the composition of Schneider et al, the instant composition has a proliferative effect. However, while Schneider et al is indicated as increasing the probability of thrombosis, The instant composition is indicated as lowering this probability by through the healing power of this proliferative effect (see page 2, line 15-21; page 3, lines 19-24).

With regard to arguments concerning the routine optimization of the values, applicants apply case law. However, the fact pattern in the instant application differs. The problem here however, it that one is never told what the natural percentage of each constituent is in naturally occurring ECM. In this way, one would be able to judge whether the modification is within the ordinary skill of the art or not. In the cited cases, there is knowledge as to the effects of the individual constituents and their effects. Further, the unlike In re Aller, the only variable here is that of concentration. Also unlike Merck, the individual constituents do not have additive detrimental effects to be considered.

For these reasons, it is deemed that the rejection should be maintained.

The following is a new rejection of the claims:

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

Applicant claims a specific formulation of laminin, collagen Type IV, and heparin sulfate at specific percentages. However, the specification never sets out the naturally occurring percentage of each component. Without this information, it is impossible to convey that the applicant did not merely use the naturally occurring percentage of each. Clarification is requested.
